

Industrial School Report.

The following report of the trustees of the Vermont industrial school is made public:

Number of boys in school July 1, 1900, 124; number of boys committed during the past two years, 158; whole number of boys during the two years, 320; number of boys discharged, 136; number of boys transferred to house of correction, 3; number of boys eloped, 4; total, 187; number of boys in school July 1, 1902, 133; number of girls in school July 1, 1902, 27; number of girls committed during the past two years, 34; number of girls returned during the past two years, 5; whole number of girls during the two years, 66; number of girls discharged, 24; number of girls transferred to house of correction, 1; total, 38; number of girls in school July 1, 1902, 28; number of children July 1, 1902, 161; number of boys committed to the school, 1,431; number of girls committed to the school, 187; number of boys and girls committed to the school, 1,618.

The expense of the school for the past two years, as shown by the report of superintendent, has been $23,100 25, per capita expense, $145 28. The trustees, acting under the advice of the Governor and under authority of Act 130, Laws 1900, purchased the Hanneman place, so called. This property consisted of a house and barn and about 15 acres of land and was practically surrounded by lands belonging to the institution. The purchase price of the place was $1,800. With the balance of the $2,500 appropriated by said act, supplemented by the labor of the older boys and the officers and employees of the institution, the house has been removed back about 20 rods from the highway and upon a good foundation with a suitable basement and converted into a good substantial cottage large enough to accommodate from 35 to 40 boys.

The building is plain but warm and conveniently arranged with a good system of heating, plumbing and ventilation. We are satisfied that this purchase will prove a wise and profitable one for the state. The land alone with the good orchard that it gives us will pay at least 4 per cent net on the entire cost of the property. This purchase makes the farm belonging to the institution symmetrical in form, transforms an unsightly spot over which the state had no control into a useful and ornamental addition to the property of the school. The new cottage is being used as the home of about 30 of the younger boys in the institution—boys that, in the judgment of the superintendent, should be kept as much as possible from the companionship of boys older in years and older in all that is vicious and demoralizing. By this arrangement better results are attained and the congested condition that existed in the main building is relieved.

The straw beds which have been used for the boys in the past have been cast out and good spring beds and mattresses put in their place, a change appreciated by the inmates and we believe a wise sanitary measure.

The buildings are in good repair and the stock and farm in a most satisfactory condition.

The proposed session of the Danish West Indies to the United States encounters considerable opposition in Denmark, though the Government of that country desires to dispose of the islands for the sum of five millions. Oct. 22 in the Landsting, or upper House of the Danish Parliament, the bill to provide for the ratification of treaty of cession failed of passage, the vote being a tie, 32 to 32. The announcement of the result is said to have caused great excitement. Earlier in the year the measure was opposed in the Parliament, but it was supposed that the elections held last summer, in which session was an issue, would result favorable to the project. This, it appears, has not been the case, and further developments will be awaited with interest.

For a Bad Cold.

If you have a bad cold you need a good reliable medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to loosen and relieve it, and to allay the irritation and inflammation of the throat and lungs.

There is at least one lighthouse in the world that is not placed on any mariner's chart. It is away out on the Arizona desert, and marks the spot where a well supplies pure fresh water to travelers. It is the only place where water may be had for 45 miles to the eastward and at least 30 miles in any other direction. The "house" consists of a tall cottonwood pole, to the top of which a lantern is hoisted every night. The light can be seen for miles across the plain in every direction.

Double-Dyed Knavery.

"Stim milk masquerades as cream. Things are seldom what they seem."

The poet might have added that olive oil is expressed from the seed of the cotton plant, and that when smeared on small herrings the joint product becomes sardines; that the orange marmalade of commerce comes from the humble turnip; that the cherry which adorns your cocktail grows on the hoof of the calf, and so on ad infinitum, ad nauseam.

Only not so much so as formerly. Most of the states have laws against adulteration, which are vigorously enforced. The locomotive tests insure us reasonably pure milk. The tartness of vinegar is no longer a laboratory test. Oleomargarine may be a wholesome product, but nowadays a paternal government sees that you know from which part of the cow your butter is derived.

But there are no laws against substitution, and this is the age of substitution, the day of parasitism and piracy in business—and, it might be added, in politics. The statesman who promises his henchman a certain appointment, "or something equally good,"—and usually gives him the latter—is a substitutor who plays the game of keeping the word of promise to the ear and breaking it to the hope as cunningly as the enterprising maker who imitates the name of a popular bicycle or the gentle scoundrel who palms off a cheap drug for a costly one. One half of the business world lives on the brains of the other half. The most familiar motto of the advertiser has to be: "Beware of imitations." For the one man who has an idea, and the courage and the capital to exploit it, there are nine men waiting to steal it from him. Even literature has its parasites. Let a novel or a play make a popular hit, and within a month a dozen publishers or managers have palatable imitations on the market.

This is the meanest phase of human nature. The substitutor is a double-dyed knave, for he steals not only the purse, but the good name of his victim. The just-as-good kind of merchandise is never so good as the original, for if it were, it could be sold on its merits. And the meanest kind of substitution is that which prevails in the drug trade. This is simply trading with human life. Most of the proprietary remedies are of value in the treatment of the ailments which they are advertised to cure. They could not have succeeded without merit. Advertising can do much, but it cannot make the public buy a poor article more than once or twice. The substitutor being a thief at heart, and having already stolen the good name of the producer, sees no reason why he should keep faith with the consumer. He tells him that "this is just as good" as the advertised article, and then deliberately gives him some preparation which will not cure and may injure, because there is more money in the transaction for the heartless substitutor.

There should be laws in every state against substitution, and they should be enforced as rigidly as are the laws against adulteration and infringement of patent right.—Buffalo, N. Y., Express.

JOHNSON.

OBITUARY.

Miss Grace C. Sargent entered into life, Sunday, Oct. 19. She was in her 21st year. For four or five years she had been in frail health, and some six months ago she had a severe attack of appendicitis, from which she never fully recovered and from which she suffered intensely at times till the final attack which resulted in her death.

She was an earnest Christian and had been a member of the Methodist church for several years. Her sweet spirit and consistent Christian life endeared her to all who really knew her, and were especially manifest by the brave and uncomplaining patience with which she bore her suffering and weakness. During her last illness she was conscious that she could not recover, yet, as her parents desired her to have a surgical operation, as a possible means of help, she cheerfully and bravely submitted. When she realized that she could live but a few hours, she made plans for her burial and left loving and helpful messages for many of her friends. She welcomed death with a smile and said: "It is so beautiful."

Rev. R. F. Low of Barre preached her funeral sermon from the words found in Mark 14, 8, "She hath done what she could." Her relatives and friends all felt the appropriateness of the words of the text. The Epworth League, of which she was Vice-President, her Sunday School class and many friends covered the casket with a profusion of flowers and trimmed the grave. While she is greatly missed from a large circle of friends her influence for good remains and will be a continual source of helpfulness. As a friend she was true and loyal at all times, and a helper wherever she found a need, at home or elsewhere.

Her parents, brothers and friends have the deepest sympathy of the community in their great bereavement.

OLD SCOTTISH DOMINIES.

Their Thoroughness in Expounding the Scriptures Never Equaled.

The length, breadth, depth and thoroughness of the Scottish sermon of the eighteenth century were vividly portrayed by Dr. Watson, better known as Ian MacLaren, in one of his lectures. A subject, as he remarked, was thoroughly thrashed out in those days. One text furnished a minister with eight sermons, another spread his comments and explanations upon a passage of eight verses over a period of nine months, while a third commenced a course of addresses to his congregation on the epistle of St. James in 1766, and a whole generation had passed away before it was completed in 1792. Even the endurance of Scottish congregations seems sometimes to have been unequal to these great trials, and an order had to be issued that the people should not entertain their neighbors with discourses while the minister was holding forth.

It must have been easy to slip into heresy in those days. The declaration of a stern Cameronian of the middle of the century, which has fortunately been preserved, indicates the ready pitfalls for the feet. "I leave my protest," said he, "against all sectarian errors, heresies and blasphemies, particularly against Arianism, Erastianism, Socinianism, Quakerism, Deism, Bourgeoisism, familism, skepticism, anabaptism, millenarianism, pelagianism, Campbellianism, Whitefieldism, latitudinarianism and independency and all other sects and sorts that maintain any error, heresy or blasphemy that is contrary to the word of God, particularly the toleration granted by the sectarian usurper, Oliver Cromwell, the anti-Christian toleration granted by the popish Duke of York and the present continued toleration granted by that wicked Jezebel, the pretended Queen Anne."

The wisest of Frenchmen. Skeptic, philosopher, abstracted from the world, Montaigne nevertheless does not shrink when the choice comes between speaking out and keeping silent. Can we repeat too often his "We must rend the mask from things as well as from men?" This is no easy task. Even the strength of the young mountaineer may not suffice. Masks familiar to us all our lives become very dear. Let us leave them; there are other things to do. Is there not something ignoble in this use of our courage, to maltreat an old, venerable appearance? Give us some work of poetry and romance; bid us scale heaven. And so the masks of things remain unmoved. Old Montaigne had something sturdy in him at bottom. There is the admiration of the heroic in him always. Of the three philosophers that he studied, the epicurean, the pyrrhonian, the stoic, his heart was inclined to the last, and I think he would rather have had a nod of approval from Cato the younger than have heard Sainte-Beuve salute him as the wisest of Frenchmen.—Henry D. Sedgwick in Atlantic.

How Lead Pencils Are Made.

Few people are aware of the difficulties that were surmounted in the manufacture of the common lead pencil. In the first place, the graphite of which it is made is rarely found sufficiently homogeneous to allow pencil lead to be cut from it, so it is always ground to powder and then pressed into blocks. The great difficulty was to press the blocks until the graphite was hard enough to use, and for many years every effort in this direction was defeated by the crumbly nature of the material. Finally a device was employed that exhausted the air, after which the blocks were again pressed, and when this was done the material was found to be as hard as when taken from the quarry. But thousands upon thousands of dollars were spent in experiments before the result was reached.

Indiana's Tall Men.

A civil war record of the height of Indiana soldiers shows that out of 118,254 there were 15,047 5 feet 10 inches tall, 8,706 5 feet 11 inches, 6,679 6 feet tall, 2,614 6 feet 1 inch, 1,357 6 feet 2 inches, 406 6 feet 3 inches and 330 over 6 feet 3 inches. Commenting on these statistics, the actuary of the United States sanitary commission writes, "It is evident from our statistics that the Indiana men are the tallest of the natives of the United States, and these latter the tallest of all civilized countries."

Familiarity With Snakes.

Familiarity with the snake breeds toleration. He is a lawless sort of creature certainly, with too many vertebrae and no eyelids, but he is not always so horrible as he is imagined. A snake is rather a pleasant thing to handle than otherwise—warm, firm, dry, hard and smooth on the scales, rather like ivory to the touch. He is also a deal heavier than you expect.
